

Second Lecture In Biology Set Given By Wynne-Edwards

Professor Addresses Society on "Ancestry of Man"

CONTINUES SERIES

Part of "Biology In The Changing World" Group

"The Ancestry of Man, that immature branch of the ape family," was discussed by Mr. V. C. Wynne-Edwards at the regular meeting of the Biological Society last evening. Due to shortage of time, it being necessary to condense the material of some 250 ordinary lectures into little more than an hour. Mr. Wynne-Edwards gave his audience of some 300 people, only a brief resume of the topic.

Evidence of the existence of animal forms which were alive some hundreds of millions of years ago, said the speaker, come from three sources—fossils, evolution of animals, and the recapitulation of certain animals such as the frog, of their whole development from a lower form. From evidence of these kinds we find that the original form of the Chordata, the phylum to which man belongs, had about the same degree of organization as the common earthworm. Such an animal was amphioxus, who had simple excretory, blood-vascular, and feeding systems.

Simple Feeding System

This latter function was carried out by means of passing a flow of water through the gullet by the mouth, and out again by the gills where food particles were collected by a sort of sieve. Between amphioxus and the lampreys we have no record of an intermediate form. These animals, partly parasitic, are considerably larger than amphioxus and so found the sieve system of getting food to be inadequate. Accordingly, they developed the ability to chase after their food and catch it in their mouths. In the lampreys also, was first found evidence of pigmented blood, that is, blood containing haemoglobin. Lungs were also evolved to make up for the decreased ratio of exposed surface to the body volume. The blood system was improved by the addition of a single heart which pumped the blood to the complex branching blood capillaries. Here too appeared the first brain, made up of a hollow cavity at the bottom of which was a thickening in the wall, and throughout the thin upper cortex of which were smaller thick parts comprising a set of paired eyes, paired nasal organs and organs of balance.

The next stage in the development of vertebrates was a strengthening of the body wall by the formation of ribs and body cartilage. Then the first reptiles came into being and were characterized by their ability to live away from water, a thing which the intermediate group of amphibians had not been able to accomplish. Finally, from these stages evolved the mammal in most species of which eggs are done away with and the young are fed directly by the milk of their mothers. In this group are classed the humans, whose "emergence" will be dealt with in the next lecture, to be given by Dr. T. H. Clark on December 10th. The lecture was illustrated with slides.

Mock Parliament Attracts Freshmen

Tomorrow evening, in the Union Ballroom, the first Freshman Mock Parliament to be sponsored by the McGill Debating Union will be held. Jack Edwards, winner of the Bovey Shield, will be Prime Minister, and, supported by Leonard Brown, will lead the government on the subject "Resolved that the youth of today will prove better leaders of society than has the older generation." The Opposition will be led by Glyn Owen, supported by Jean Scholnick.

Mel Doig, President of the McGill Debating Union, will be the speaker and will introduce to those present, Professor George, of the Department of English, who will give an address on "The Art of Public Speaking and Debating." This talk will last about twenty minutes and will be given before the main resolution is brought before the House, so that many valuable pointers can be secured by the debaters, before the Parliament begins.

This Parliament is being arranged by the Junior Standing Committee of the Debating Union, which aims to promote debating and Mock Parliaments among the Freshmen and newcomers to the University and which is also planning to arrange several inter-faculty debates in the near future.

Revue Chorus Rehearsals Begin Tuesday In Ballroom

McGill Glee Club Sings At St. Annes On December 7th.

THE McGill Glee Club will give its first concert of the season at St. Annes de Bellevue on Saturday evening, December 7th. The complete choir has also accepted the invitation to sing for the Soldiers Home on the same afternoon while at St. Annes de Bellevue.

The choir will consist of the main group and an octet to be chosen by Mr. Norris. A quartet from the medical students is now under consideration.

Many songs were rehearsed at the meeting which was held last night in the union ballroom. Many new songs were sung including the following, "Alma Mater," "Out of the Dusk," "Sweet and Low," "Johnny Smoker," and "Fight of McGill." The next meeting is to be held on Thursday, November 28, in the Union Ballroom.

R. V. C. Luncheon Is Addressed By Principal Morgan

Stresses Value of Personal Contacts in Extra-curricular Activities

THE FIRST R.V.C. senior class luncheon was held in the Grill Room of the Union at 1.00 P.M. yesterday, with Principal Morgan as the guest of honour. Principal Morgan, Mrs. Vaughan, Miss Stella Morgan, Judy Moore, president of the class; Phyllis Jackson, vice-president; Miss Muriel Baker, secretary-treasurer; Marjorie Smith, president of the Women's Union; and Helen Fyffe, president of the Women's athletic society, were seated at the guest table.

Principal Morgan, in his address, congratulated the senior girls on reviving the function of a luncheon to consolidate the unity of the graduating class. "It is good to consolidate your sense of unity as a class," said Principal Morgan, and he expressed the wish that this idea be passed on to the Juniors. "After leaving the University this year, you will all enter different walks of life. You will look back with pride to your membership at R.V.C. and especially prize your membership of this particular year."

The Principal expressed his regret that he was unable to know every student of R.V.C. personally, for their interests and activities, both academic and social, are his interests. Principal Morgan stated that he was looking forward with keen anticipation to meeting other students of R.V.C.

"Those of you who live at R.V.C.," added the Principal, "are very fortunate and lucky for you are experiencing real college life. You have great opportunity for intimate contact with one another." The Principal said "that the value of corporate life in the community is a valuable factor in your education. To those of you who do not live at R.V.C., I would advise to use all its facilities. What you can learn in college outside the university is very important." The Principal then concluded by extending to the graduates the best wishes for their future success.

Judy Moore thanked the Principal for honoring the senior girls with his presence. They then sang the Alma Mater, and the luncheon adjourned.

Maccabean Circle To Hear Address

Continuing its policy of holding Friday night study groups, the Maccabean Circle will hear Sidney Friedman in an address on the "Lost Tribes" this Friday at 8.15 p.m. in Strathcona Hall.

Friedman will discuss the little-known facts of history and the current hypotheses concerning these lost tribes and will deal with the Palashas of Ethiopia, the Khazars of Russia, and the Bene Israelites of India. Ben Schneider will act as chairman, and refreshments will be served following the open discussions.

In the regular meeting, Sunday, December 1st, members of the Circle will be addressed by Dean W. D. Woodhead, of the Faculty of Arts and Science, on the topic "Hellenic Culture." Future speakers at the study groups and their topics follow: Judy Or-

Alan G. Murray Directs Chorines For Red and White Production

New Committee Heads Meet For First Time Today in Revue Office

FOLLOWING the decision of Alan G. Murray to direct the chorus again, the Red and White Revue of 1936 will hold its first rehearsal in the Union Ballroom next Tuesday, Dec. 3rd, at five p.m. Ward O'Connor, the producer, stated last night all girls would be welcomed, but that he expected a large turnout. "Freshettes will be particularly expected, although we hope that those who took part last year will also be present."

Costumes will be unnecessary at this first rehearsal, as only a short practice will be held. It is designed principally for the reception of applications from coeds who wish to gain places on the chorus of the Revue.

The next executive meeting of this year's production will take place this afternoon at 4 o'clock in the Revue Office in the basement of the Union, when the newly-appointed committee heads will meet for the first time.

Skills and music for the show are still in demand, and will be received until Saturday, November 30th. Prizes will be given for the best skills; the first consisting of two tickets to the Revue and a ticket to the Cabaret; the second of two tickets to the Revue.

Pictures on Sale

According to an announcement of the executive, reproductions of the poster containing the pictures of last year's show may now be obtained in the Revue Office for the price of forty-five cents. These reproductions consist of a collection of several of the photographs which were exhibited in the Arts Building and the Union last year.

Junior Prom Plans Nearing Completion

Ticket Sale Beginning to Show Promising Results

With ticket sales now getting definitely under way, the response to the sales campaign of the Junior Prom Committee has been encouraging, and, according to a report of the Committee, after a meeting yesterday afternoon, prospects look promising for this year's function.

The Mount Royal Hotel Plaza, with its unique decorative background, will be rendered still more attractive with the decorations that are being planned for now by a special sub-committee consisting of George Herring, Bill Bradley, and Ross Newman. Arrangements have been made to introduce a scheme of the decorations so as to obtain a bizarre effect in accordance with the gaiety and sparkle of the dance itself.

The Junior Prom is scheduled for early next month—the sixth of December, a Friday night. Thus there remains little more than a week until the day comes, and the music of Howard Simpson and his Privateers, well known for their orchestral ability not only on the campus of McGill but in Montreal at large, entertains the crowd that turns out every year to celebrate this gala event.

The price has been kept as low as possible, the committee declares, considering the fact that the prom is in a hotel and that there are attendant expenses. The committee also states that favorable comment has been occasioned by the comparative price of the dance in respect to other years—this year the price per couple is $4.50.

Principal Morgan and Mrs. Morgan and Mrs. Vaughan will be amongst the patrons at the Prom. Others have been invited and have not as yet sent in their reply.

Junior Prom tickets have been placed on sale in all faculty buildings, as well as such places as the Union Truck Shop. They may be had at any time from now until the Prom gets under way, though, as is pointed out by those in charge of the affair, the dance will be facilitated by giving the committee an approximate idea of the number of those who will be present.

WORLD NEWS

ADDIS-ABABA—According to a government communiqué, the Italian southeastern army has abandoned the two strategic towns of Gorrabel and Gerlogubi on the Ogaden front, "under pressure by the Ethiopians." The two towns are important water-centers and will be re-occupied by the Ethiopian army.

ROME, Italy—An official communiqué here claimed that about 100 Ethiopians, including two governors of provinces, have been slain in a battle at Lamina Seldini in Southern Ethiopia on the border of Italian Somaliland. Italian losses were estimated at four native soldiers dead, five wounded and two missing. The Ethiopians were completely routed, according to the press release.

QUEBEC—There will be a meeting of the Cabinet today, following Monday's elections, in which the Taschereau government's seats in the provincial legislature were greatly depleted, and the question of re-organization will be discussed, due to the defeat of two ministers, Hon. Arcand and Hon. Vautrin. The present distribution of seats now stands at 48 for the Government as against 42 for the Opposition, but recounts and contestations in some wards may bring about a change in the seating.

RIO DE JANEIRO, BRAZIL—Loyal federal troops gained an important victory over the rebel forces and succeeded in driving them from their stronghold at Socorro, state of Pernambuco. Troops were also marching on the remaining rebel stronghold, Natal, in the state of Rio Grande do Norte. It was accompanied by a bombing squadron. Estimates of the number dead in the civil uprising, which was due to Communist inspiration, were given as anywhere from 40 to 60.

PARIS—The threatened overthrow of the Laval ministry seems to have been averted, and the first encounter of the government, in the Chamber of Deputies, seems to have been weathered. In a broadcast speech last night Premier Laval showed great hopes for success, in contrast to his more recent addresses. Edouard Herriot, chief of the Radical Socialist Party has been influential in ensuring the Government of the radical vote.

Gammer Gurton's Needle Repeated By Drama Students

By M. F.

A repeat performance of "Gammer Gurton's Needle" was given in Moyse Hall. Last Thursday night a performance was rendered for the benefit of the students taking English 2, whereas last night's performance was open to all students of McGill. This play, written probably by William Stevenson in the sixteenth century, was essentially an Interlude.

The scenery, the lighting effects, the costumes, and the direction, were successfully handled so as to produce an atmosphere highly suggestive of the 16th Century.

John Dando, in the part of Dame Chat, gave, perhaps, the most outstanding performance. His voice and gestures were typically feminine, and it is even unlikely that a female could have portrayed the part to better advantage. The part of Hodge was rendered by Anthony Chapman, in a highly commendable fashion. He contributed, in no small measure, to the amusement of the evening.

The roles of Gammer Gurton and Diccon the Bedlam were very well portrayed by Rae Guess and Melville Davidson respectively. Malcolm Mark, Hugh Farrell, Leonard Starkey, Alan Bourne, and Archie Casselman also deserve mention for their performances. However, those who played Cock and Dr. Rat, would have done better to enunciate more clearly, since they were scarcely audible.

The play centered about the loss of Gammer Gurton's needle. A number of little searches took place until Diccon, the Bedlam, promised its return. Being a rogue at heart, he merely intended to amuse himself at the expense of the simple folk. He then instigates a quarrel between Dame Chat and Gammer which finally leads to blows. This pugilistic display marked the highlight of the evening's performance.

The climax of the play is reached when the long-sought-for needle is found at the seat of

THE Study Group Series sponsored by the student Peace Movement gets into action today at 5.00 o'clock in Strathcona Hall when the first group of the series will meet under the leadership of Neil Morrison. At seven o'clock another group will meet headed by Mendel Laxer. Tomorrow there will be two groups meeting in Strathcona Hall at 5.00 o'clock headed by Ken Baker and Mel Davidson.

Group 4, Wednesday, 7 to 8. Leader, M. Laxer. Beth Duncan, E. Hughes, M. Laxer, E. Salomons, D. Hall, M. Brooks, Jack Wigdor, H. Finlay, V. Bychow-sky.

The subject of the opening series is "National Antagonisms." The leader will open the discussion with a short review of the various opinions that exist on this subject, and discussion will then come from the floor.

Juanita de Shielas, chairman of the Study Group Committee made the following announcement about the Study Groups last night: "These study groups are being formed in order to get to the rock bottom of problems that may in the near future have a life and death meaning for all of us. They are not intended to be mere forums where the hundred students who have already signed up may air their views. We expect that the discussion will be tolerant and broadminded and we urge all students who are at all concerned with the problems of war and peace to attend at least the first groups."

At the meeting of the Current Events Club at the Montreal High School for Girls on Tuesday, November 26 two students from the Student Peace Movement addressed the gathering. The first speaker, Juanita DeShielas stressed the horror and futility of war, adding that it is responsibility of the coming generation to avert future wars. Pearl Garmaise outlined the work of the McGill S.P.M. and its recent conference and stated that a closer bond was needed between high schools and universities. As a result a council of high school students was elected, comprising the following: Alla Jacobs, Daisy Aboud, Elizabeth Daily, who is the president of the Current Events Club, Doris Lockhart, and Muriel Kerr. Miss Hadriell, history specialist, was present. A lively interest was evinced by the whole group.

Presbyterians Hear Dr. Leroy Johnson

Dr. Leroy Johnson, M.Sc., Ph.D., of the Department of Genetics of McGill, will address the Literary and Philosophical Society of the Presbyterian College tonight at 7.15 p.m. The meeting will take the form of a Student Forum, being thrown open for discussion after the speaker has presented his case.

Dr. Johnson will discuss religion from the viewpoint of the scientist, considering, whether or not, from such an angle, the claim of theology that it is the science of religion is valid.

The speaker is a graduate of the University of Alberta, where he received his B.Sc. and his M.Sc. degrees in agriculture, and of Washington State University, Pullman, Washington where he received his Ph.D. He has come to McGill recently to do research work with Dr. Huxkins in the Department of Genetics and to act as an assistant.

His talk will re-instate the Literary and Philosophical Society of the Presbyterian College as an active part of the college, after its years of dormant, or semi-dormant, existence in name only. Once more it will act as a source of mental stimulus among the Presbyterian theologians.

Hodge's difficulties—in the lower extremities of his breeches. The performance, as a whole, afforded an hour of complete enjoyment, and it is decidedly to the credit of the members of English 12 and 22

Poster Competition For New Production Closes On Saturday

Prizes Offered For Pictorial Portrayal of Scenes From "Crime at Blossoms"

AUTHOR ENJOYS SUCCESS

Play Will be Given Dec. 12, 13 and 14 in Moyse Hall

THE Poster Competition, which the Players' Club is featuring for the purpose of obtaining pictorial representations of its new production, "Crime at Blossoms," closes this Saturday, November 30th, and all those interested in portraying pictorially some vivid scenes from the play by Mordaunt Shairp, combined with the essential details of production, are advised by the club executive to send in their work as soon as possible. The Players' Club is offering as prizes for these posters, $5.00 (in cash) for the best portrayal, and four and two tickets respectively for "Crime at Blossoms" for the second and third best posters.

"Crime at Blossoms" will be given by the McGill dramatic group on December 12, 13 and 14 in Moyse Hall, and rehearsals for the production are going ahead at top speed. The Players' Club is pointing for an even greater measure of success than they have enjoyed in previous years with performances of "Rope," "The Devil's Disciple," "Escapade," and last year's "Autumn Crocus."

Author Enjoys Success

Mordaunt Shairp, author of "Crime at Blossoms," is at present enjoying success with his latest venture in authorship, "The Green Bay Tree," a psychological study, which met with great approval, proving an instant stand-out both in London and New York, where it had sensational runs. Recently Shairp also collaborated with Lillian Hellman in the authorship of "Dark Angel," for the screen, which received great praise from the critics.

"Crime at Blossoms," also, has been well received by the hard-to-please critics, combining as it does a fast moving plot with a good deal of humour. The drama concerns the adventures of an impecunious couple, the Merrymans, who lease their cottage, "Blossoms," and return to find that a murder has been committed, and that the newspapers have given it much publicity. Mrs. Merryman contrives to take advantage of this seemingly unfortunate turn of events, and convert "Blossoms" into a side-show for the morbidly curious. The later appearance of the real murderer, and the subsequent sequence of events forms the main body of the play.

Special Rates

The dramatic production will be given in Moyse Hall at special rates of 35 cents for students and 75 cents for the general public. Anyone desiring further information concerning "Crime at Blossoms" may inquire at the club room in the Union.

Mark Twain's Life Outlined In Speech

The St. James Literary Society was addressed last night by Mr. C. O. Reiffenstein, a member of the Society. November 30th being the one hundredth anniversary of the birth of Samuel Clemens, the speaker's subject was a short description of the life and works of "Mark Twain," the well-known pen-name of this famous author.

Mark Twain was born in 1835, in the town of Hannibal, Little is known of his actual life, but his books have left an indelible impression upon the annals of literary history. His writing was greatly influenced by his acquaintance with Artemus Ward and Bret Harte.

Mr. Reiffenstein's talk was seasoned with little humorous excerpts from Twain's more successful works. Particularly well received was the well-known "whitewashing incident" from Tom Sawyer, which was published in 1875. This was followed by its sequel, Huckleberry Finn, in 1884. His Connecticut Yankee is the story of a Yankee in King Arthur's court. This character was recently portrayed by the late Will Rogers, in the moving picture version.

One of the humorist's sayings which the speaker recalled was the incident of Mark Twain being offered a drink early in the morning. His reply was, "I am refusing for three reasons. Firstly, I never drink before breakfast. Secondly, I am a prohibitionist. And lastly, I already had three."

On April 21, 1910, Mark Twain died. His last words were "Good-bye. I die meet—!" His ability to tell a story, said the speaker, compelled the attention of his readers. Beneath all his fun, however, there was a fortune of serious thought.

Commerce Sophs Meet Professors At First Banquet

THE GRILL ROOM of the Union was the scene of the first class banquet of Commerce '38 last night. The guest speaker was Professor Culliton, who stressed the danger of the student overlooking the experiences of the past and probing too much into future politics. "The Universities have two windows—one looks down at the dark, mellow ages; the other, the new one, looks at the blaring days of the future. There is danger of looking too much into the latter."

Professor Tale, "being but a plain, blunt man and no orator," also gave a very short address. Dr. Villard concluded the speeches by relating a few of his experiences while travelling in Europe this past summer.

Jewish Charities Campaign Collects One-fifth Objective

Faculty of Arts and Science Leads With Total of $20.50

THE Jewish Federated Charities Campaign had obtained over 20% of its objective of $275 yesterday, the actual sum collected being $125. The Faculty of Arts and

A meeting has been called, for all Federated Charities workers, this afternoon at 5 P.M. in the Union.

Science is leading in contributions to date, having amassed $20.50 of the total.

The reports from the various faculties indicate the following returns:

Arts and Science	$20.50
R. V. C.	13.00
Law	6.00
Dentistry	5.00
Other Faculties unreported.

Today, the executive stated, will be the crucial point of the whole drive, and it depends upon the amount of money collected today whether the drive on the campus will be a success or failure. The committee in charge this year includes Clarence Gross, the chairman, and Beatrice Klineberg, Morton Godine and Ben Schechter.

The objective of the central committee in charge of collection throughout the city has been raised this year to the extent of $20,000. Due to this fact the executive urges that all Jewish students cooperate with the men and women in charge of the collection on the campus in making the drive a success. The campaign will close on November 30th.

The faculty chairmen for the drive are: R.V.C.: Anne Romoff; Architecture, Jack Kugel; Engineering, Leonard Kirsh; Law, Ed. Creinstein; Dentistry, Leonard Lang; Commerce, Jack Wigdor; Medicine, Leo Kirshberg; Arts and Science, Ben Schechter and Clarence Gross; Special Names, Morton Godine.

All faculty chairmen are asked to make their report of the day's activities to the central chairman before 7.30 each evening.

Outlines Travels In Manchukuan State

John Close Tells of Experiences of Journey to Orient

"Travels in Manchukuo" formed the topic of an address delivered last night before the Historical Club, old-time of campus clubs, by Mr. John Close, who spent six months last year in Manchukuo. Mr. Close outlined the course of his travels and some of his experiences in China. Announcement was also made last night that Principal Morgan has accepted the request of the club to fill the position of Patron, which has been left vacant by the death of Principal Currie.

Mr. Close spent a short time in Peking, then journeyed to Mukden, after a change of trains at the Great Wall. Ten men can walk abreast on the wall, said the speaker. Close also inspected some of the Japanese defences in the Hingan mountains and viewed Shinkiang, the new capital of Manchukuo, before leaving the Orient.

Flight From Freedom

AT the conclusion of the last war to end war, the principle of freedom had apparently emerged as the supreme political philosophy of Europe. Only in Russia, where the Soviets had gained an upper hand, was liberty of speech and the press circumscribed. Apparently the continent had emerged from the dark ages of censorship, cruelty, and oppression.

Less than twenty years later, the position is far worse than it had ever been before the war. Only two of the great powers are not under the rule of dictators. Italy, Germany, and Russia are all labouring under the iron heel of oligarchic rule, with little hope of any change.

In Germany, Hitler's position now seems even more secure than it has been. There are now none to challenge his dictatorship within the country, and free speech, except for the Nazis, is entirely absent. In Italy, too, the situation is gloomy. Mussolini rules with an iron hand; no contrary opinions can be expressed. His position is not so strong as is Hitler's, due to the war of conquest which he is waging against Ethiopia, but even here the dictator's position is good.

Russia's case is slightly different. Free speech is, after a fashion, allowed in the U.S.S.R. It is possible, for example, for any resident of the U.S.S.R. to criticize the way things are being done; but most certainly no criticism of the theories of Marx or their application at the hands of Stalin is permitted. Yet there is room for hope here for the policy of the Soviet Government has changed from rigid oppression to a considerable amount of toleration.

In France, too, the situation is not very bright. There is a growing feeling there that democratic government has failed, and a growing tendency by the extremists to take affairs in their own hands. At present, both the extreme left and the Fascist group (the Croix de Feu) are armed, and have even had several pitched battles with many being hurt. The situation resembles that in Germany before the Reichstag fire, and the outlook for freedom is correspondingly dark.

It is only in England, of all the European countries, that liberty has not been seriously challenged. The so-called threat of Mosely's Fascist party seems to have fizzled out against the solid traditions of democracy and the common sense of the British people. Here alone can we say that freedom is supreme.

It is evident from this summary that as far as Europe is concerned, the sacred traditions of democracy and freedom have given way to the terrorism and vain tyranny of dictatorship and oligarchic rule. Whether this condition will persist is an entirely different matter.

Although the countries on the continent have not the traditions which enabled the English-speaking peoples to maintain the ideals of liberty, yet it is impossible for any thinking people to abide under such a bitter yoke for any great length of time. By the very nature of its rule, dictatorship, and its consequent oppression, must vanish from the face of the earth.

Facing Fascism in France

MYSTERY MAN of French politics is Comte Colonel de la Roque, leader of the "Croix de Feu". His military background coupled with his associations with Big Business mark him out as a leader more Fascist in essence than even a Hitler or a Mussolini. His adherents combine speeches with military manoeuvres. Their aim is to conquer power by extra parliamentary—meaning bloody—means. According to revelations in the Socialist press, they have been given specific instructions as to how each unit must act when the hour arrives for the "putsch" on Paris.

There is to be a "strong" government. What?

program will be is extremely, perhaps purposely, vague. Of late, promises have been made implying Socialisation. Needless to say the Croix de Feu also pretends to be the bitter enemy of international financiers. Nothing is said of those financiers who, fearful of real Socialism, support it.

Eyes Right

IT may be easy to exaggerate, for it is impossible to estimate, the actual support and sympathy on which de la Roque can count. The forces of the Right are by no means confined to his organization.

Founded in 1924 to combat Communism, the "Jeunes Patriotes" under Pierre Taittinger has aims not dissimilar to the "Croix de Feu"—though its organization be separate. One of their ardent universal members put it to this observer: "Hitler is at least no worse than the English, typifying quite an attitude. Then there is the 'Solidarité Française.' It is more un-French in its approach and less powerful in numbers. Its leader, Jean Renaud, has pointed out that if he attains power at seven o'clock in the morning, 'at eight o'clock I will suppress l'Humanité (Communist organ), at nine o'clock I shall have Leon Blum (Socialist chief) executed.' What will be done after nine o'clock, M. Renaud does not specify, nor does anyone ask. Still further in the Fascist background are the Francistes and an incipient National-Socialist organization, blatantly anti-semitic.

Gentlemen, The King

DIFFERING very much from any of the above, the "Action Française" tries to offer a "third-way" solution to those disgusted with parliamentary government or, as they might say, lack of government. It is not simply a product of recent troubles and has long advocated return to the monarchical system of government. Its strength lies particularly amongst a certain intellectual element in France, vigorous but not violent. Of de la Roque, it remains suspicious; skeptical, particularly of his lack of program.

Merely to illustrate the varied nature of the free-for-all mention might even be made of a pamphlet which has come to the attention of yours truly. This pamphlet announces to the harassed Frenchman that the twenty-one year old, handsome Prince Napoleon—descendant of Jerome Bonaparte—will be the ruler of the people. There are also other Royalist forces which regard the Action Française as "too democratic."

AGAINST all of these, and other, forces of the Extreme Right, the Left stands alarmed and united. Colonel de la Roque would be the first to disclaim parentage; but it is he who is responsible for the Front Populaire. From Radical Socialists to Communists, the Front represents an alliance against any Fascist tendencies.

Undoubtedly this union is a simple marriage of convenience. It is none the less significant. Profiting by its disastrous experience in Germany, the Communist party has now forsaken its former intransigent opposition to all bourgeois parties. The Socialists, in turn, have always received a good deal of support from peasants not really Socialist but anxious to preserve freedom and democracy. Finally the Radical-Socialist party, most numerous of all in the Chamber, stands more than any other party to lose its very raison d'être should the parliamentary regime be overthrown. Thus fear of Fascism is the common denominator joining three large groups basically very different and with principles otherwise incompatible.

"A bas la guerre"

EVENTS of the last few weeks have seen the honours divided between the two camps. Backed by a reactionary press, the Fascist and near-Fascist parties have been quick to seize upon the Abyssinian situation to their own advantage. For undoubtedly it was they who more clearly and definitely—if not more logically—expressed the almost universal antagonism to any steps that might lead to war. The Frenchman who tries to remain an innocent bystander between Right and Left was given the impression—justly or otherwise—that the Left favours policies which endanger peace. In the game of out-heroding Herod, Conservatives and reactionaries seemed more zealous for peace than did their adversaries. Their cause profited thereby.

On the other hand, important gains have been registered by the other side. The Senatorial elections confirmed, if only slightly, the continued swing to the Left. Marcel Cachin, editor of l'Humanité, becomes the first Communist member of an august body, conceived originally as the last bulwark against radical change. There has been a rapprochement of three minor Socialist parties distinct from the main Socialist body which is known as the S.F.I.O. Above all, considerable significance attaches to the final alliance of the two great trade union federations (the C.G.T. and the C.G.T.U.). Incidentally, in this connection, rumour has it that Labour already stands prepared to employ the General Strike as last weapon of defence against Fascism, should the necessity arise.

Dissolution of Leagues Demanded

FINALLY, the recent Radical Socialist congress succeeded in having adopted a resolution calling for the dissolution of the Fascist Leagues by the government. All of these alliances and measures manifest the fear of, and resistance to, a proposed coup.

So far the present government has been vacillating towards the Leagues which, armed and ready for action, constitute a menace to the present regime. Premier Laval has friends and many enemies in both camps. However, the Laval Ministry—like every other French Ministry—continues in power only upon sufferance. To retain the support of the Radicals, support which is essential to his continuance in office, Laval may possibly try to suppress, or at least disarm, the Fascist groups. Possibly.

After Laval, What?

IT may well be that the Front Populaire would not be anxious to assume power at the present time and under present circumstances. Andre Bertried's classic observation that the French Left is always more successful in opposition than in power seems still to hold true today.

Economic Situation Troublesome

THE budget has long been in a precarious position. This, combined with the spectre of monetary inflation, motivated the Chamber of Deputies to yield, but only temporarily, some of its supreme power to Laval. The latter was enabled to govern by decrees-laws. That was some months ago.

Immediately, reductions of 10% were made in government payments—salaries, pensions and interest. It is on these payments that so many French people depend for their revenue; no wonder a spontaneous storm of protest arose. It has not yet died down. It is true that simultaneously the government introduced measures calculated to lower the cost of living. These need not be outlined. Suffice to say they have not substantially succeeded in attaining their aim. The retail price index fell somewhat from July to August but since that time it has been rising, or remaining stationary. "La vie est chère" is a widespread and understandable complaint—particularly understandable to a foreigner who, in addition, loses heavily on the exchange.

Deflation and Sacrifices Entailed

THE situation is not without resemblance to that of Great Britain in 1926 when a deflationary policy led to a General Strike and other disastrous consequences. Meanwhile the depression continued. Revenue, trade, tourist income continue to diminish. As confidence dwindles, hoarding and a periodic flight of capital abroad proceed.

All the while the franc has been and is in an extremely strong technical position. There is no lack of gold to meet almost every conceivable emergency. No party dares favour inflation, or even devaluation.

Vive le franc

THUS the franc can probably be maintained. Whether it is worth the sacrifices it is demanding is quite another question. Consequently a financial crisis is possible. There already is an economic crisis.

With no Polaire on the horizon, the political consequences might be momentous. There are many groups in France struggling for a power they can only attain when the people are reduced to desperation. Economic hardship is the surest means of rendering any nation desperate.

Vive la France

IT is not to be imagined that the average Frenchman subscribes or will eventually subscribe to the views of either extreme group. He is essentially a liberty loving individualist. His attitude probably corresponds to that of one of the principle characters in Henri Bernstein's current drama, "Espoir". "In all of this bitter quarrelling and agitation, it is so soothing to think that there are men who still go about their daily affairs peacefully, honestly, and anxious only to do their best in this troubled world."

Nevertheless, for better or for worse, political change is the work of minorities. The eyes of all those interested in political developments are focussed on just such minorities in France. Under the guise of nationalism, Fascism rears its ugly head. Economic difficulty lends impetus to the desire to jump from the Capitalist frying pan to the Fascist fire. However, so long as there exist men to defend them, the rights of labour and the liberties of the individual are not doomed.

Correspondence

The Editor,
McGill Daily,
Dear Sir:

I hope you have given deep consideration to ex-C.O.T.C.'s letter in yesterday's Daily. Compulsory C.O.T.C. is a goal for every red-blooded patriot. In these days of imminent war, of avaricious threats from the United States of the Yellow Peril in the west—now is the time for every loyal young man to come to the aid of his country! We have a Conscription Act. Let us enforce it and uphold our Dominion to the world as an example of far-sighted preparedness.

The fact that your patriotism is weak is no reason for not joining the C.O.T.C. There are so many other delightful points on its program. If you want social activities, join the C.O.T.C.; if you want physical training, join the C.O.T.C.; if you want outdoor sports, join the C.O.T.C. In fact, if you want anything but militarism, join the C.O.T.C. This is, of course, not a militaristic organization. In the West, students join it in order to pay their student organization fees; in the Maritimes, they join for the Annual Smoker and Dance; at McGill, they join in order to wear that lovely uniform and have a free skiing trip to the Laurentians once every two weeks.

Let us demand en masse that an armory be built instead of a gymnasium. Government assistance could be readily arranged for such a worthy project. How I long for the day when I shall sit in the stadium with all my fellow-officers, cheering a mock battle between McGill and R.M.C.

Students of McGill! Awake! Soon the day will come when the graduates of McGill Armories will take up the white man's burden and make the world safe for democracy!!

Redmen Practice Hard Cage Squads First Interfaculty Bowling Meet Slated For Tonight

Team Journey to Capital Saturday — Juniors Meet Canadians Saturday — McConnell Leads Red Scorers With Four Points — Seconds Play Juniors Today at 1 p.m. — Bourcier Continues to Lead Senior Group Scoring

PRACTICES have been the order of the day since the beginning of the week for the three Red hockey teams, especially the first string outfit who play a very important game up at Ottawa this Saturday against the Barber Poles. The Juniors play their second game of the season, against Canadians, in the latter half of a double header. The feature of the practice today is a game between the Intermediates and Juniors. In a similar encounter last week the Juniors came out on top by 6-2 but the ex-Bushmeachers are confident of telling a different story this time.

Red Team In Second Place
At the present time the Redmen are in second place behind the Verdun six with the Ottawa team in the third position. The Senior Group continues with the usual double header tonight, Verdun meeting the cellar team, Lafontaine and Vies encounter Royals in the night cap. Verdun should add two more points to their grand total while the second game may go to either squad with the odds being on the sixth place Royals who are due for a win.

Jean Louis Bourcier continues to lead the individual scoring record with fourteen points, eight goals and six assists. In second position is his running mate Brown with 11 points. The first McGill man on the list is Russ McConnell with two goals and two assists for a total of four. Crutchfield, Morse and Paddock are the next Redmen in line with three points each.

Junior Meet Canadians Thursday
The Junior team will face another strong Seattle on Thursday night when they stake up against the Junior Habitués in the second game. The boys lost a close game to Verdun last Monday and the squad showed up very well. In the other game on Thursday the Vies outfit meet Lafontaine. The Juniors should be able to remedy plenty of faults as should also the Seconds in their game today. Both teams will give everything they have and the game is more than worth the price of admission which in this case happens to be nil.

The Intermediates have a strong team, although their presses are inclined to go astray and with a few more games under their belt should become a well balanced squad. The league they are in this year is a very strong one with the exception of St. Lambert and Concordia seem to be the team to beat.

Intermediates Meet Southwestern "Y" at Latter's Floor

PREPARING for their opening league tilt this coming Saturday the Seniors and Intermediates are training assiduously every afternoon at the M.H.S. gym. The Seniors meet the Notre Dame de Grace outfit on the High floor in the first of a ten game league schedule. They play two games each with McGill Grads, Central Y.M.C.A., Grand Trunk, Y.M.H.A. and N.D.G.A.C.

The Red Seconds play the season opener in the Intermediate "A" League playing at Southwestern "Y." This is also a ten game circuit with Southwestern "Y," Y.M.H.A., C.P.R., Y.M.C.A. and Montreal West providing the Reds with plenty of keen opposition. These league games will prepare the Red squads for their intercollegiate encounters and it is hoped that the first squad will be able to regain the college crown which they held for so many years before dropping it to Varsity last year.

Gormley New Captain
Gene Gormley is the present captain of Van Wagner's senior troupe. Others who played on last year's quintette are Brown and Bows. Some who have made good from last year's Seconds are Greenblatt, Scriver, Corrigan and Rutherford. The mainstays of this year's Second team are, Mislav, Schofield and Purdy, all of whom were members of last season's outfit. This trio are ably supported by a number of newcomers.

The following is the schedule for the two teams:

Schools of Architecture and Commerce Engage in Initial Tilt — Teams Composed of Five Men Each — Both Managers Express Confidence — Each Team Boasts Outstanding Alleymen — Different Modes of Training Disclosed

By T. H. M.

A NEW intramural activity is now in the process of being born. Tonight Commerce and Architecture stage the classic of the century when the balls roll in the first interfaculty Bowling Meet. Weeks of secret training have gone into the formation of the two teams, and final selection has been made of five men from each faculty to fight to the last ditch for the university championship.

Statement By Commerce

"It is some weeks now since our fine aggregation has gone into a strict regime of swinging the lead in preparation for the coming struggle, and I feel that with the aid of this most beneficial and healthful exercise the great Commerce machine will experience little difficulty in overwhelming any feeble opposition that may be put up by the School of Architecture, whose representatives, I understand, are uniformly successful in placing the ball in the gutter at an early point in its course," was the statement of playing manager Charles N. Turner of the Commerce team. Bowler Turner is supported by four supreme exponents of the art, outstanding among whom are Hugh Savage, whose balls are reported to be inevitably accurate in finding their mark and McEwen, a dark horse reputedly equal in ability.

"With a dexterous twist of their muscular wrists" quipped manager Hammond last night when asked how his Architectural team were bowling "we are flooded with topnotch material, and the only problem has been one of selection. Our first ranking alley man is Art Lacoursiere, champion of Shawinigan, and he is backed up by Harold Cooperberg, champion of Rosemount, Robert Fleming, champion of Laprairie and Dave Skellon, champion of Sherbrooke. The remaining vacant position on the team is being hotly contested by Louis Fabbro, champion of Sudbury and Dixon, a local bowler whose balls are held to be exceptionally deadly on account of his slow delivery. Manager Herbie Hammond himself is familiar with the ins and outs of the whole issue from long experience on his farm on the west coast.

Rigorous Training By Teams

The Manager considers that the Architectural physique is admirably adapted to the alley art due to the exercise given the wrist in the prolonged use of the pencil—and rubber. This advantage has been heightened by a rigorous course of exercises, featuring the repeated bending of the elbow before and after workouts. It is easily understood that the morale of the Architectural Rollers is high.

So the two teams enter into this inaugural tilt with high hopes. Strikes will probably be many, as both managers insist that their men have been some time before the holidays. At this meeting, will be announced the team which is to represent McGill at the new year's college meet at Lake Placid. As there will be several important topics up for discussion, all those interested in the club should watch the Daily for further announcements.

Rambling At Random

By Ego

RIDING on the crest of a three game unbeaten streak, the McGill senior hockey team travels to Ottawa Saturday to meet the fast flying Senators there, in what should be one of the speediest encounters of the season. Both teams are renowned for their speed, and when they really get going should have the customers gasping for breath. Last time McGill went to Ottawa they rolled up seven goals against the Barber Poles, and as the memory of that licking rankles in the hearts of the Ottawans, they will be out for revenge Saturday. In view of the week-end's major attraction, the C.N.R. is running a special excursion to the Capital city on Saturday, and it will be well worth the while of the McGill supporters to make this a holiday week-end, and drop in at the Auditorium to see the game. Ottawa crowds are usually rabid supporters of the home team, and a little vociferous aid from McGill fans would do the cause of the Red men a lot of good. Against good opposition McGill always puts up a sparkling exhibition, and there is no doubt about Ottawa being capable of drawing the best out of the Red team. This will be the game of the season, and it's tough luck for the fans who miss it.

CONGRATULATIONS to a certain Nosmoking, who has dared to disagree with some of the statements brought forth in this "A.G.'s" column. While we don't think Nosmoking realizes the true significance of all he has said, we do appreciate his or her criticism. In answer to a statement that it would be difficult to find a solution to the tainted amateur situation in Canada, Nosmoking stated that professional football was a huge success in the United States, and as the moguls were worrying about the condition of things here in Canada, they should dole out more cash and develop a good professional football league here. We ask, where are these football promoters going to get the money to pay their teams? It's all right in cities like Chicago, New York, Boston, and other great centres of population in the United States to publicize their professional teams, and to draw anywhere from thirty to sixty thousand fans to a football game, but can you see cities like Barmia and Hamilton doing the same sort of thing. The upkeep of a professional team demands gates of from six to ten times the number of people who go to see a football game in Canada. It is well enough to say that if the quality of the football is improved the crowds will increase, but when you stop to consider the relative numbers of football going people in the United States and in Canada, you can easily see why professional football can not be made a success in this country. Promoters can pay for a few stars, but they cannot pay for the upkeep of a whole team, and as only last week the A.A.U. of Canada voted against allowing amateurs and professionals to play together, we still assert that the problem of finding a solution to the situation is difficult.

TO continue on this amateur professional question, it is interesting to compare the attendance between N.H.L. hockey crowds and those of the Senior Group. At what is probably the highlight of local hockey, the inter-city battle between Maroons and Canadiens, the attendance last week was somewhat under 7,500, while at an amateur double-header on Sunday there were over 10,000 fans in the Forum. Comparative costs of admission can to a great extent be blamed for the difference in the crowds, but this is not the only reason. The fans, a great many of them, are personal friends of the players. They go to see people whom they know, play hockey, and this would be the same case if professional football were introduced. There have been pro football games played here, and there has been talk of introducing a league, but never have there been more than 1,500 people at those pro games, and none of them have been very much impressed. The fans want amateur sport, and the substitution of professional for it will not serve the purpose.

WHILE speaking of the professional hockey games, Ego took a trip out to the Forum last week to see Canadiens and Maroons play. It was a great game, and certainly the hockey was better than that shown in the Senior Group, but there was nothing like the interest or excitement that characterizes those Wednesday and Sunday doubleheaders which the amateurs stage. The only time we rose out of our seat was when Jack McGill came on the ice, and that to say the least was a natural reaction. Jack, who is still known around Montreal for his McGill hockey exploits is rapidly becoming a star. He gave evidence last year in the playoffs with Rangers that he would be a man to watch in the future, and he has certainly been keeping up to that late season form this fall. At the present time of writing he leads the scorers of the Canadian hockey team, a squad that is only half a game behind the leading Toronto Maple Leafs. Twice he has come through with winning tallies, and on other occasions he has come through with points that have sent his team on its way to victory. With five points to his credit, McGill is tied with Aurel Joliat, the mighty mite of the Frenchmen, and to keep up with that artist is a true mark of worth. You'll hear more from Jack before the season is over.

QUEEN'S took a fearful trouncing from Hamilton Tigers last Saturday, which is to be expected, as you can't win a football game on spirit alone. It was a tough break for the Intercollegiate Union that the beating had to be by such a large score, as it will probably make it necessary for it to keep its intercollegiate teams out of Dominion playdowns in the future. On paper Queen's looked like a fair match for the Mountain men, but on the field, they were outclassed in everything but fight.

Rambling At Random

By Ego

RIDING on the crest of a three game unbeaten streak, the McGill senior hockey team travels to Ottawa Saturday to meet the fast flying Senators there, in what should be one of the speediest encounters of the season. Both teams are renowned for their speed, and when they really get going should have the customers gasping for breath. Last time McGill went to Ottawa they rolled up seven goals against the Barber Poles, and as the memory of that licking rankles in the hearts of the Ottawans, they will be out for revenge Saturday. In view of the week-end's major attraction, the C.N.R. is running a special excursion to the Capital city on Saturday, and it will be well worth the while of the McGill supporters to make this a holiday week-end, and drop in at the Auditorium to see the game. Ottawa crowds are usually rabid supporters of the home team, and a little vociferous aid from McGill fans would do the cause of the Red men a lot of good. Against good opposition McGill always puts up a sparkling exhibition, and there is no doubt about Ottawa being capable of drawing the best out of the Red team. This will be the game of the season, and it's tough luck for the fans who miss it.

CONGRATULATIONS to a certain Nosmoking, who has dared to disagree with some of the statements brought forth in this "A.G." column. While we don't think Nosmoking realizes the true significance of all he has said, we do appreciate his or her criticism. In answer to a statement that it would be difficult to find a solution to the tainted amateur situation in Canada, Nosmoking stated that professional football was a huge success in the United States, and as the moguls were worrying about the condition of things here in Canada, they should dole out more cash and develop a good professional football league here. We ask, where are these football promoters going to get the money to pay their teams? It's all right in cities like Chicago, New York, Boston, and other great centres of population in the United States to publicize their professional teams, and to draw anywhere from thirty to sixty thousand fans to a football game, but can you see oldies like Sarnia and Hamilton doing the same sort of thing. The upkeep of a professional team demands gates of from six to ten times the number of people who go to see a football game in Canada. It is well enough to say that if the quality of the football is improved the crowds will increase, but when you stop to consider the relative numbers of football going people in the United States and in Canada, you can easily see why professional football can not be made a success in this country. Promoters can pay for a few stars, but they cannot pay for the upkeep of a whole team, and as only last week the A.A.U. of Canada voted against allowing amateurs and professionals to play together, we still assert that the problem of finding a solution to the situation is difficult.

To continue on this amateur professional question, it is interesting to compare the attendance between N.H.L. hockey crowds and those of the Senior Group. At what is probably the highlight of local hockey, the inter-city battle between Maroons and Canadiens, the attendance last week was somewhat under 7,500, while at an amateur double-header on Sunday there were over 10,000 fans in the Forum. Comparative costs of admission can to a great extent be blamed for the difference in the crowds, but this is not the only reason. The fans, a great many of them, are personal friends of the players. They go to see people whom they know, play hockey, and this would be the same case if professional football were introduced. There have been pro football games played here, and there has been talk of introducing a league, but never have there been more than 1,500 people at those pro games, and none of them have been very much impressed. The fans want amateur sport, and the substitution of professional for it will not serve the purpose.

WHILE speaking of the professional hockey games, Ego took a trip out to the Forum last week to see Canadiens and Maroons play. It was a great game, and certainly the hockey was better than that shown in the Senior Group, but there was nothing like the interest or excitement that characterizes those Wednesday and Sunday doubleheaders which the amateurs stage. The only time we rose out of our seat was when Jack McGill came on the ice, and that to say the least was a natural reaction. Jack, who is still known around Montreal for his McGill hockey exploits is rapidly becoming a star. He gave evidence last year in the playoffs with Rangers that he would be a man to watch in the future, and he has certainly been keeping up to that late season form this fall. At the present time of writing he leads the scorers of the Canadian hockey team, a squad that is only half a game behind the leading Toronto Maple Leafs. Twice he has come through with winning tallies, and on other occasions he has come through with points that have sent his team on its way to victory. With five points to his credit, McGill is tied with Aurel Joliat, the mighty mite of the Frenchmen, and to keep up with that artist is a true mark of worth. You'll hear more from Jack before the season is over.

QUEEN'S took a fearful trouncing from Hamilton Tigers last Saturday, which is to be expected, as you can't win a football game on spirit alone. It was a tough break for the Intercollegiate Union that the beating had to be by such a large score, as it will probably make it necessary for it to keep its intercollegiate teams out of Dominion playdowns in the future. On paper Queen's looked like a fair match for the Mountain men, but on the field, they were outclassed in everything but fight.
